DESCRIPTION OF THE WORK DONE IN BRIEF

During the first week of internship, I was introduced to the fundamentals of Java programming and core object-oriented concepts. I studied objects, classes, abstraction, encapsulation, inheritance, and polymorphism to understand how Java applications are designed in a structured and reusable manner. I also learned about the Java platform, including the roles of JDK, JRE, and JVM, and understood the basic structure and execution flow of a Java program.

As part of hands-on learning, I implemented programs using constructors, conditional statements, and looping structures to strengthen my logical thinking and problem-solving skills. I further explored interfaces, method overloading and overriding, and exception handling concepts such as try-catch blocks and custom exceptions.

This learning experience helped me develop a strong foundation in core Java and improved my ability to write clean and reliable code.
